

Daree Lewis is the Director of Alumni and Philanthropy Programs at SEO. Daree's prior experience includes serving as Vice President of Education at Junior Achievement New York. As Vice President, she supervised a team of twelve, responsible for the implementation of the Junior Achievement (JA) programming in New York City schools and reaching 140,000 students. Daree also worked closely with the members of JA's Board of Directors to help each Director meet his or her funding and volunteer goals each fiscal year through various recruiting and fundraising events.

In 2004, as a National Urban Fellow, Daree earned her Master's in Public Administration. While completing her coursework, she acted as the Special Assistant to the Senior Vice President of Community, Governmental & External Affairs at the Atlanta Housing Authority. There she created their first employee volunteer initiative and worked to raise money for the Atlanta Community Scholars Award, a scholarship for students in living in Atlanta's public housing communities.

Daree received an undergraduate degree from Queens College in Sociology, concentrating on the impact of education of different groups. While at Queens, she received the Citibank Summer Intern Award, for teaching computer skills to children in her community.